Now is the time for Thanksgiving. For music and greetings and mirth.

A song for the old folks we honor—A song for the little one's birth.

In the home as we joyfully gather, As gayly we sit at the board,

We lift up our praise to the father—Accept our thanksgiving, O Lord!

DEWEY

Mrs. May Matthews

A mistake in last week's items was a surprise party on Fred Gresham and wife which should have been Joe Simmons and wife. It being Joe's birthday and his relatives came with their dinners and dined with him and wife.

Fred Gresham and wife had their party Thursday night when the Philathea Society of Salem met there and had a good time.

Fred Winter and family called on Mrs. George Carns one afternoon last week.

We were at the station Monday evening when the remains of Grandma Frost, who passed away last Sunday, were being sent to her old home at Fowler, Ill., for burial, and as we saw the casket tenderly deposited by the loving hands of friends to await the coming of the train; many beautiful thoughts came to mind of how we had seen her in other days, at the old Frost homestead, where for so many years she was the loving and beloved grandmother to a vast circle of relatives and friends, and we said, (unheard by any) "thank God for the leaflets of memory!"

Was it Jasper, Mo.?

One lonely night, pitch dark and dreary, When the roads were slick and sneaky And the air quite cool and damp. Suddenly before me streaming I beheld the cheerful gleaming Of a Coleman Quick-Lite lamp.

There was no need of sighing, For before me there was lying A small town where I could camp. I drove down the bumpy main street And just missed a post of concrete— Thanks to that good Coleman lamp.

Over crossings still I stumbled, And I swore as well as grumbled, Till the rain began to pour. Then I headed sad and tearful, For that Coleman lamp so cheerful Shining from the hardware store.

There is nothing quite so sneaky To a fellow worn and weary As a town without street lights. Ghosts and spooks around you prowling Vicious dogs on all sides growling And all kinds of feline fights.

With a light plant that's expiring And it's manager retiring, Coleman lamps in every store Would prevent a trav'ling stranger Swearing such a place of danger. He would visit "nevermore".

Thanksgiving Day

In the days of long ago we looked upon Thanksgiving Day as the day of Feast, when Turkeys played their part toward making us feel that it was a day to be thankful for; but alas turkey meat is too high to think of now. Hog meat and chicken sounds good to us now and at the price corn is it pays to raise hogs if you are prepared with good fences so you can save all you raise. We have a good stock of American Fence on hand and you all know this is the leading fence sold. The price is very near the same as it was 20 years ago when we first sold it and every one thought it cheap then. You cannot invest your money better if you are fixing your place up to sell or to keep. We have a nice line of Silverware—1847 Rogers and Community Plate ware, Knives and Forks, Spoons, etc., also Pyrex and Cut Glass.

Come See Your Humble Servants.
